WHAT DO PEOPLE SAY?

Cole Burmester
CEO and Publisher at Four Jandals Adventure Travel Blog

“Sebastian and I presented together at the Vigo Destination 2.0 conference in Galicia. We explained how travel bloggers can work closely with tourism boards and companies to help promote their regions to travellers. Sebastian is extremely hard working and very knowledgeable about how to provide the best results from press trips using social media. I highly recommend him to anyone looking to promote their destination.”

Catalina Ospina Serrano
Public Relations and Corporate Communication

“Working with Off The Path has helped us to increase the brand visibility of our clients through great content. With Off The Path we have been able to reach a targeted audience according to our clients requirements and needs.

We have been working with Off The Path on different campaigns and the quality of the site as well as the positive impact of the content are just some of the important assets to highlight. In addition, we enjoyed the personal and professional way the team behind Off The Path handled all our proposals!”

Why Adventure & Spa?

We want to write about all aspects of traveling. By including the spa aspect to the blog it is easier to write about the accommodations we stay at. Active traveling is coming more and more popular and due to the search queries and e-mails we get from readers we are more or less forced to start this program. Adventure travels is far bigger than most believe, with turnover of an estimated $89 billion (international outbound from the Americas and Europe exclusively), excluding air travel costs, in 2009, and estimated growth rates of 17% since then.

What Are Adventures?

The ATTA has defined “adventure travel” as a blend of three different types of travel. The well-known traditional type is a physical activity of some kind in a destination. But cultural tourism, where travellers experience a new culture in some way, and nature tourism, ranging from eco-tourism holidays to hiking trips, also fall under the association's broad definition. The sector tends to be divided into 'hard' and 'soft' adventures. Hard adventures tend to involve more physically demanding activities and/or specialised training. Whereas ‘soft’ adventure - which is where the most promising growth lies - blends physical adventures with such enriching activities as culinary pursuits, agritourism, archaeological and wildlife viewing by day, while offering comfortable stays in family-owned accommodations with gourmet experiences by night. Basically, people are increasingly stepping outside of their comfort zones to seek self-discovery and authentic, transformative experiences. People's views of the world have changed. People increasingly want to get back to basics, to experience real things.

Examples can be: Kayaking, Boat trips, Hiking, Animal Encounters, Bike trips, Snorkeling and Diving, Skydiving, Canioning, Paragliding, Helicopter rides, Zip lining, HorseBack Riding, Road Trips, Shark Cage Diving, Racing, Mountain Biking, White Water Rafting, Local Markets, Cooking Classes, Safaris and much more…

What Are Spa’s?

The combination of Adventure and Spa is becoming very popular. People like to relax after a long active day. Things such as Spa Treatments, Massages, Sauna, Yoga, Ayurveda, Gyms, Hot Springs and much more are part of this programme.
Numerous companies, DMO’s & Bloggers trusted our knowledge in the past.

We regularly speak at tourism conferences like ITB about blogging and how companies can benefit from working with bloggers. We have been blogging successfully for over two years and helped many companies to maximize their brand exposure online.

We consult companies and DMO’s in blogger relations and social media and have been working with DMO’s such as Innovation Norway (visitNorway) and the Polish Tourism Bureau where we helped to organize famtrips with bloggers, held workshops regarding how to work with bloggers and how social media really works.

Bloggers trust our success at the Blog Camp. Every two months we organize a blog camp in Europe where up to 20 Bloggers get together for a weekend full of workshops how to maximize the potential of their blogs.
